PETUNIAS AND ODDMENTS
by Jessie Beard Rickly
Awarded Bronze Medal

FOREWORD

THAT the Midwestern Artists' Exhibition worthily represents the art of the region is due to the ability of the artists and the clear seeing of the jury. Meyric Rogers, director of the City Art Museum of St. Louis, and Wilbur D. Peat, director of the John Herron Art Institute, Indianapolis, both experienced jurymen of important shows, both utterly without bias toward conservative or radical styles, both shockingly uninfluenced by names or places, judged each picture solely on the basis of success as a work of art. The only question they asked of the administration was, "How many pictures do you want?" I replied, "As many as have the quality to represent Midwestern artists." Honesty of vision consistently maintained throughout a picture is not a common achievement, and tricks of style, whether old or new, are fatal to it. It was some such basis of judgment which seemed to underlie the choices of the jury as I watched them at their work. The result is a show of diversity of character and consistency of quality. The artists have painted their own country and the life about them, and have done it well. Fifty years ago Walt Whitman prophesied of this part of the world, all the teeming life that is here—all but the artist who would see in it the inspiration of his art.

THE SCHOOL OF THE KANSAS CITY ART INSTITUTE

High technical training and creative teaching characterize the faculty. They use freely the great collections of the Nelson Gallery of Art and the Atkins Museum of Fine Arts to develop in the students the clear seeing and the understanding so needful to a young artist who is to develop his own power in a rapidly changing world. A sound knowledge of drawing, modeling, painting and design form the foundation for individual growth.
